

Time to say goodbye!

Since this is the last issue of PERIO – Periodontal Practice Today, it is time to say thank you and goodbye to our readers who, through their faith and subscription have made it possible for this journal to run for the past 5 years.

A lot of enthusiasm and also time was put forward by us, the editors, to make this a success. If we look into the number of manuscripts that we received, the journal was growing in a sound way. This is also reflected in the number of reports published in this issue. So it is also time to thank all the authors, who shared with us their ideas and experiences.

The dramatic economic changes during recent months were one of the major reasons for the publisher not to continue with the journal. PERIO was a common European idea born between friends in the European Federation of Periodontology. So it is also time to thank all friends and reviewers of the journal and to say goodbye. Perhaps in the future, times will change again and hopefully there will be a similar product, which will be more successful than this one.
